

A Lion in the House

a film by Steven Bognar & Julia Reichert

Rubric – PROMOTING CULTURAL COMPETENCY IN THE MEDICAL COMMUNITY

Criteria	3	2	1	Comments
Knows why cultural awareness in the medical community is important to his/her own cultural community	Shows full understanding of importance with supporting examples	Some understanding of importance but with no supporting examples	Little or no understanding of importance
Understands purpose of service activity	Fully aware of activity's purpose and has good grasp of desired results	Lacks full understanding of activity's purpose	Vaguely understands purpose of activity and shows little interest in outcome
Participates voluntarily in class discussions with good self expression	Full participation with considerable self expression	Some voluntary participation and self expression	No voluntary participation. Contributes minimally when called upon.
Contributes ideas to planning and plan development	Shows leadership in planning	Is willing to follow but lacks leadership skills	Shows no interest in helping plan the project
Shows ability to work with others reliably	Works with commitment, enthusiasm; is willing to give others credit	Gives some effort to working with others	Shows little interest in working with others
Strives to make a creditable representation of his culture to the medical community	Very motivated to make a good showing as a cultural broker	Somewhat motivated but would prefer to have others do most of the work	Has no desire to be part of an effort to promote cultural competency

You can make a difference

"You know you are truly alive when you are living among lions."
— Isak Dinesen